Living Kaurna Cultural Centre

This Aboriginal education venue is located at Warriparinga, a 3.5 hectare Kaurna cultural heritage site that includes wetlands and buildings dating back to early European settlement. The centre features arts and cultural heritage displays and runs workshops and tours. Warriparinga is a meeting and ceremonial place for Kaurna and Indigenous people and is the gateway to the Tjilbruke Dreaming story. The Coach House and Fairford House are two dwellings of significant European heritage of early settler life in the region. The site is also home to the Warriparinga Wetlands which was established in 1998. Stroll around the grounds and wetlands on your own or call the centre to book a group tour with a cultural guide.

MARION HERITAGE RESEARCH CENTRE

245 Sturt Road, Sturt (J-10)

T 7420 6455

W marion.sa.gov.au/marion-heritage-research-centre

The Marion Heritage Research Centre is an exciting focal point for cultural heritage in Marion, one of the oldest colonially-settled areas in Adelaide. It is a place where documents and photographs relating to its history are kept, preserved, shared and researched. The centre has acquired many interesting and unique heritage items, and a team of volunteers are helping to develop a burgeoning history collection.

Feel free to drop in and browse Marion's history.

MARION HISTORIC VILLAGE

Township Rd, Marion (J-8)

W marion.sa.gov.au/marion-historic-village

The Marion Historic Village is the historic heart of the city and locals are proud of its friendly community and unique history. 'The Marion' as it was known to locals, was once a bustling rural community producing almonds, grapes and vegetables and supporting an important brick-making industry. The Marion Historic Village walk brings the past to life and provides a fascinating insight into the area's heritage.

At the Wesleyan Chapel, keen-eyed visitors can identify early parishioners from initials carved into locally produced bricks. Early Australian innovation is evident behind the Catholic Church on Township Road where the bell tower is supported on one side by an old gum tree.

Nearby is Annie Doolan's Cottage, built in 1876 as a convent and school for Mary Mackillop's sisters of St Joseph. In late winter, blossoming almond trees in Oliphant Avenue Reserve remind visitors of agricultural days now long gone. Local stories of life in days past are celebrated through five 'Little Marion' sculptures by Gerry McMahon and the mosaic Hopscotch by Beachroad Art-works. Places of historic interest are highlighted by mosaic footpath signs by artist Irene Dougan. The Marion Historic Village Walk has been created as a partnership between the City of Marion and local residents. A detailed brochure containing self-guided walks is available at Council offices and online.

MARION DISPLAY CENTRE & MUSEUM

Township Rd, Marion (J-8)

W marion.sa.gov.au/marion-historic-village

The Marion Display Centre and Museum was established in 2011 by a group of enthusiastic community members who recognised the importance of sharing the Village of Marion's has a unique history.

A group of volunteers have established displays on many different features of the village of Marion planned by Colonel William Light in 1838. The displays comprise maps, photographs, products, videos, and a touch screen. The centre is open every Sunday from 2-4pm and is run by volunteers. Admission is free. The museum is also a part of the heritage walk around the old village of Marion.

MARION VINEYARD

Oaklands Rd, Park Holme (I-6)

The Marion Vineyard is now well over 100 years old and is the world's oldest urban, commercial vineyard. It is owned by the Marion Council, but Patritti Wines are the proud custodians of the impressive vines, part of only a few tiny vineyards remaining in the once-renowned 'Garden of Adelaide' district. The village of Marion was first settled by Europeans in the 1830s, and the rich, fertile soils of the area produced copious vegetables, almonds, and stone-fruits. However, by the 1950s population growth and the demand for housing meant that much of the area was converted to residential land. Luckily, the Marion Vineyard remains – an iconic reminder of the history of the district and the quality of the produce for which it was famous. To try or buy 'Marion' visit Patritti Wines on Clacton Rd (H-10).

WALKING & CYCLING

W marion.sa.gov.au/cycling-and-walking

The City of Marion contains a wide range of walking and cycling trails to suit all fitness levels. We've included information on three routes that provide very different experiences. Details of all local trails, including maps and videos, are available on our website.

COASTAL WALKING TRAIL

W marion.sa.gov.au/coastal-walking-trail

This 7.2km walking trail extends from Marino in the north to Hallett Headland Reserve, Hallett Cove, in the south. Enjoy spectacular views of the Gulf St Vincent, world famous geological formations, public artworks and the cultural presence of Tjilbruke Dreaming. The trail includes boardwalks with steep steps that require a reasonable level of fitness, although you can join the trail at locations to suit your ability. There are cafe's at either end of the trail so you can take in the magnificent views, relax and unwind.

Two maps detailing walks, facilities and what you will see along the way are available on our website. Post your pics on social media using #marioncoastalwalk

STURT RIVER LINEAR PARK SHARED TRAIL

W marion.sa.gov.au/sturt-river-linear-park

The City of Marion hosts 5kms of this flat walking and cycling path that runs alongside the Sturt River between Glenelg North and Coromandel Valley. Allow about two hours to walk from Willoughby Avenue Reserve in Glenelg, through Kenton, Oliphant and Maldon Avenue reserves and Oaklands Wetland and then to Warriparinga. Along the way there are six sites with state-of-the-art signs featuring voice recordings, Aboriginal artworks and rare photographs. The sound recordings blend voices and atmospheric sound including didgeridoo, Kaurna language, children playing in the river, kookaburras and old trucks. A map is available on our website.

COAST TO VINES RAIL TRAIL

W marion.sa.gov.au/coast-to-vines

This 37km trail follows the route of the original rail corridor from Marino to Willunga and you'll need to be fit to undertake the full journey. The City of Marion hosts 8km of the route which begins at Marino Rocks station and travels along the eastern side of the Cove Rd, takes you close to the Hallett Cove Conservation Park, past Capella Drive Skate Park to Hugh Johnson Reserve where you can enjoy a barbecue. A map to help plan your trip is available on our website.
